Monday Memo – May 13, 2019

Publications

Chair’s Corner

As we work to recognize and address issues contributing to the national problem of clinician burnout, more attention is being directed to the impact of stress and burnout on academic environments and the treatment of learners. Here at UMass, much work is being done to address the issue. I’d like to make note of tomorrow’s Grand Rounds, Learning Environment and Student Mistreatment, which will be presented by Sonia Chimienti, Vice Provost for Student Life and Enrollment Management, and by Anne Larkin, Senior Associate Dean for Educational Affairs.

The Grand Rounds will take place in the Memorial Amphitheater from 12-1 (lunch provided); if you can’t be there in person, you can attend over the web. The announcement, with instructions for web-based participation, is attached.